Now i have a Durabrand and simply replaced the old box in my setup, same leads, same connections BUT my digital signal is black and white and ghosting. any help, because i am stumped!!! And have gone back to my old ONdigital box, which is slow and unreliable!! ps i took my DVD, video, etc, out of the equation and plugged my STB directly into my TV and it worked perfectly, so i wonder if my DVD needs a setting changed or something!! any suggestions would be good!! Cant see any reference to it so Ill just say its my first freeview box and its a big improvement over NTL cable. Faster channel change and less clunky software. The manual is a bit minimalist so probably not that good for technophobes. It stands upright with loads of ventilation holes so I guess the message is that it shouldnt be stacked up with the other gadgets. Guess depends which region you are. Why do none of the stores have the freeview boxes connected to a TV so you can check them out.

I remember being able to do that with a set of CD players in a shop once and being amazed that it was possible to hear the difference. Apparently ASDA just give you a refund if youre not happy with the product unlike Argos and the rest. I figured a round trip to their store was a gamble worth taking. And if all the cheapos are Vestel clones, there didnt seem much point in going anywhere else. Its been fine, but when moving lost the remote. I also have a One For All Digital 4 Universal Remote URC 7544. But I cannot find the code for the Durabrand. Ive tried lots of options on the quick search and all the codes for SAT boxes which the Durabrand could be labelled as Durabrand itself isnt in the book of codes. Ive also tried Vestel, without any luck. Anyone succeeded in getting the Durabrand to work with this universal remote. Do you remember what code you used The question i will ask is, how does one set up the timer record. I can set up a start time and channel etc, but i cant set an end time. I do it by menu setup timer setting program timer Am i missing something Cheers Hallelujah!!!! No more 1.1 for me. Glen. Let us pray that Capita Business Services will learn this distinction soon. As an added bonus tuner and signal strengths seem to be much better, Im getting many more channels I didnt used to get and no pixelation or picture loss. Not holding my breath it could be just the fine weather were having in Northern Ireland, but so far this upgrade is a major improvement. Well done Vestel ASDA et al. Are you getting issues with intermittent audio loss and the remote control being out of sync e.g press volume up and get the EPG menu!! The later issue does sort itself out but is annoying. Also, I have two of these and they have different versions V6.2UK and V3.9SUCC. Anyone know what the latest version should be or if there will be a software download for either. Infact the 3.9 version is more stable than 6.9!! Apart from the intermittent issues they are fine. MO I bought two last year when Asda were selling them for 10. Both are V6.2UK. A friend of the wife got one about six months earlier hers is V3.9SUCC, I installed all three hence why I know their firmware revisions. Mine are not in regular use, wifes friends is. I have not found any issues and the wifes friend has not reported any. Have you thought of powering then off and on occasionally. Does cure a multitude of sins. As regarding firmware updates I have not seen any since I purchased mine seven months ago approx. It seems that these boxes do not get software upgrades. These boxes have now been rebranded and sold in black. However, Im thinking of buying another box ASDA LE STB0804, Both the Asda box you mention and a new Pacific also on the shelf are Vestel clones. In fact the Pacific is almost identical in styling to my SEG CDST900 bought last autumn which is also a Vestel clone. My SEG came with FW V0.3 but was recently updated to V1.4 and then a week later to V1.7. The V1.7 firmware giving you a third choice of EPG, Teletext. While I cant guarantee it I dont think the lack of a digital tick will mean the box wont work in the future. Infact my SEG has the said digital tick on the outer carton.

Regarding the Daewoo split NIT fiasco, I have two Labgear DTT100s, same box inside different styling outside, so yes I have already been caught out. Any idea if the durabrand boxes ever get firm ware upgrades If it aint broke. I suspect that it has missed a software upgrade at some time. The picture quality looks good better than the Durabrand. Remote Control The directional arrows do not adjust the volume or change channels. One has to use the dedicated buttons to do this unlike the Duranbrand. Viewing Guide takes a few seconds to kick in i.e. displays no information for a few secs then comes up with the necessary info. The Durabrand cg5660 is instantaneous compared to this box. Also, EPG is pretty fragmented and illustrates a limited number of channels at a time. Its got two scart connectors and uses c.6W power. Cost just under 20. On the whole, considering the price and picture quality, Im happy with it. However you would be a bit nearer to future proofing by buying an HD box with DVBT2 such as the box being sold by Tesco's online for 1999. The Daewoo split NIT problem was because Daewoo did not manufacture boxes to the correct spec and as such they should have been made to replace them under the Sale of Goods act. Regarding Daewoo, as others on here, I did ask for a free replacement to no avail. Disappointing really as the original box cost 80 could buy 4 Tesco HD boxes for that. ho hum! Toms Thumbs. Join the AVForums team live on Wednesdays at 7pm UK time. Mar 15 th, 2007 at 211am Help! I have a DURABRAND CG5660M Digital Set Top Box. When all the connections are in place and I switch it on the red power light comes on at the front of the box then after a few seconds it goes out and a green light appears under the Lock heading. I have tried entering different combinations of digits but to no success. I do know that it is a four digit code using the numbers 09 but have no idea what combination may be or how to find out as I have lost the manual.

I have been searching the internet all night and still havent been able to find any codes. Your help would be appreciated!! Thanks Posts 191 Scotland I guarantee the receiver will be unlocked within 10 minutes! After deleting a few unwanted channels from my box I now have the same problem with the same model. Many thanks. There is nothing in the manual to suggest what you can do to override it. NOTE TV not included. Aerial required not supplied. My old freeview box broken this morning and my dad give me a spare one he had collected but it had no remote. I have Googled the name and model number looking for a code Durabrand CG5660M but nothing has come up, except lots of messages asking for the code, but none on this site. I have even tried manual search but nothing useful come of it, any help would be greatly useful. Thanks for your time. However, if the first code doesnt work the box, none of them will. I have connected all my output leads the speaker ones. I have only one red, yellow, and white jack on my TV and three sets of red and white jack leads with home theatre system. I cant get sound no matter how many times Ive swapped the input leads. If this is the case, you wont be able to connect the TV to the receiver directly. Thats no big deal really; all you need to do connect the audio output from the settop box to the home theater system directly run the video cable to the TV and simply bypass the TV for sound. Youll be forced to use the receiver to hear any audio, but who needs TV speakers when youve got external audio.

Its a little trickier, but will work if your TV supports this type of connection. Follow the steps below to do this You dont need to worry about the yellow. On the TV, the cable should be plugged into an OUTPUT. On the audio system, an INPUT. Look in the menus that may allow you to turn the output on or off, or look for something that asks if the output should be fixed or variable. If you have that choice, choose fixed. In some cases, you need to disable the TV speakers to use the audio output. Some audio systems wont look at the analog by default if a digital signal is not present if one is assigned. Join the TechLore Community and Ask The Experts today! Explaining it a bit better, the problem is that the system has 6 input connections, which are FLwhite, FRred, SLwhite, SRred, CENwhite and SWred. How is it possible to connect this when a tv or dvd only has 1 pair of outputs Thanks. Connect it to one of those and you should all be set. My tv, dvd and sky box all have only one pair of outputs. My tv, dvd and sky box all have only one pair of outputs. My tv, dvd and sky box all have only one pair of outputs. My tv, dvd and sky box all have only one pair of outputs. It looks something like this, rightNow, theres no online resources for generic products like this a web search on your model yeilded nothing and theres no place to find manuals, so Im going to be guessing a bit based on experiences with similar products. Depending on what other features it has, it may include processing for stereo to surround sound on the remote, but not being able to find an exact match for your product it will be hard to say for sure. If you dont see six channel output 6 cables then you wont get discreet 5.1 sound. Theyre pretty cheap, and are available at most electronic stores.
