Bleached pop top inside this year and removed small amounts of mold when I replaced canvas. Worked well. Now have musty smell on fabric of bed in pop top and bed below. Likely mold working there as well. Dont want to harm fabric but want to stop this before it gets out of hand. TIA. Maybe you could run a extension cord out to your van and run a dehumidifier, or find a sunnier place to park. Sunlight is the best way to kill mold and mildew. UV rays are deadly to many, many micro organisms after that, vacuum like crazy. It wont stop whats causing it but it will deactivate the stink for a while. Works good on urine, poop, dead mice, etc. Remove the source of whats causing the smell and the enzyme stuff will deactivate the odor. Thanks Alaric. Ill contact you soon. Jalousie windows are open some pretty much all the time. Ive just had this bus outside while I finish up my other bus and the outside humidity has finally decided to cause some minor issues. Yes, Aircooleds are great. Oh and I do have modern computer controlled vehicles too, but I just don't care about them. It's a liquid enzyme solution. A quart will be more than enough. <http://misakieducation.com.np/userfiles/definition-manual-based-information-system.xml>

If the foam is really old or crunchy this could accelerate its demise. Likely due to being impatient due to being sick I decided to take advantage of the beautiful day and go slightly nuclear on this mold issue. They came out great. I set them out on deck chairs in the sun to dry. I took the foam pads and decided that they needed to be sterilized too. I then set each foam cushion on perforated metal deck tables to dry. They are still drying today. I also did this with the bottom rear cushion. I did this twice. Any slightly discolored areas came out clean after this. I also sprayed down the flip down board and the surface of the board in the back of the top bed. Everything smells real good now and I think I got all the mold up top before it had a chance to get out of hand. I also had pretty good results with Febreze. Then I found and cleaned out the horrors under the rear heater and on either side of the bench.
