CATCHPLAY began to place great emphasis on the development of digital movie content many years before other Taiwanese companies. Today, we are the largest provider of premium movie content in Taiwan, offering content from Hollywood studios including Disney, Warner Bros., NBC Universal and Paramount, as well as extensive distribution of international independent films and high-end local productions. operators. digital platforms. In addition to content aggregation, CATCHPLAY established AsiaPlay Incorporated in 2015 to become the leading premium content service provider for movie lovers in Asia. In March 2016, the CATCHPLAY+ service platform was tested in Taiwan in cooperation with major telecommunications operators and equipment manufacturers. In June 2016, the service platform was launched in Indonesia in collaboration with IndiHome market leaders, Telkom Indonesia. After that, cooperation with Telkomsel, Indosat and First Media was expanded, and in Singapore, cooperation with the leading telecommunications operator StarHub. CATCHPLAY Media Holdings Group currently owns two separate companies - CATCHPLAY Incorporated and AsiaPlay Incorporated - that produce, distribute, operate linear movie channels and content aggregation, and operate digital entertainment service platforms. Kung Fu Panda 2 is pretty much everything a sequel should be. It builds on its characters, creates a bigger and more personal plot, and its themes are even deeper than before. They see Po (Jack Black), fully embraced by the Furious Five, forced to fight a peacock named Lord Shen, who plans to conquer China with a new weapon. It doesn't seem like it at first, but Po begins to have glimpses of why his parents abandoned him, and it's directly related to Shen himself. Stories like this are great because of the setting and the end goal. Simple, but the film has a very soulful and surprisingly emotional core, which is just fantastic. It feels like a Poe story and some might get annoyed that the other characters aren't developed enough, but that was fine with me. move. It makes you always involved in his journey, you want to know what happened to his real parents, and he becomes a hero as a result of everything he's been through. Sam Poe is again very funny and I am impressed by how well balanced the character is, naive but sweet, and Jack Black adds his usual zest to the role. The Furious Five are still a very likeable team, and I think the writers did a great job of giving them the right number of lines and also making them a team to talk to. Master Shifu has a more limited appearance, but is still fun when he shows up. Perhaps best of all is Lord Shen (Gary Oldman). He's a villain who's both terrifying and very funny, and there's often too much of them, but here they get it right. Never too serious and never too stupid, perfect balance. He has a backstory that explains his actions and is related to Po's spiritual journey. The animation looks amazing on it and Oldman is great as always. I think one of the main reasons the film works so well is because of its emotional impact. All the characters have valid reasons for what they do, and their feelings and flaws are fully shown. The scenes with Po and his adoptive father, Mr. Ping (James Wong), are truly touching and funny. Memories are really touching and even bring tears. I think it shows that you can be serious and even a little dark if you can find the right balance. The jokes here are always funny, mainly due to Po's behavior and many of Shen's lines. Again from DreamWorks, the animation of this creature is just great. the sharpest and most dynamic they have ever created. Almost everything from character designs to scenic shots of ancient China looks amazing. The more two-dimensional style of Poe's flashbacks is also a nice touch and helps set it apart. The animation speed is another plus. With slapstick, the fast pacing makes everything more fun and works similar to the action scenes, giving them even more energy. The soundtrack (Hans Zimmer and John Powell) is another plus, producing just the right amount of soothing melodies and effectively complementing the action with some lighter tracks. I think balance is the key here, and that's what the success of Kung Fu Panda 2 is all about. The story itself is a great continuation, and the way it unfolds throughout the film is just wonderful. It's packed with comedy and well-placed humor, but never shies away from darker, more emotional plots. I was equally moved and laughed. As I mentioned before, I think all of the main characters are great, the animation is impressive and the villain is excellent. This is exactly what you want from a sequel and I can't wait to see where the series goes.
